Examples of Inclusionary Housing Program Characteristics

- ¹ Boulder had an prior inclusionary housing ordinance in effect in the 1980s and early 1990s. The current ordinance was designed to improve flaws in the former program.
- ² Projects of 4 or fewer units may either provide one unit of affordable housing on or off-site, dedicate land for affordable housing, or make an “in lieu of” contribution. Boulder may negotiate affordable housing set-asides of up to 50% in projects built on annexed land; in such cases, the units are split evenly between low-income households and moderate-income households.
- ³ Developers of affordable rental units have flexibility with regard to the on-site/off-site mix, and the extent to which they may meet their obligation by donating land or dedicating pre-existing homes for low-income households.
- ⁴ 25% set-aside achieved through combination of on-site construction and land dedication.
- ⁵ 35% set-aside required for rental projects over 20 units; 25% set-aside required for projects between 5 and 19 units; set-aside achieved through on-site construction and land dedication.
- ⁶ Developers must pay a fee equal to 1% of sales prices if a development does not exceed 50 units. In addition to meeting the 50 unit threshold, housing must be developed at a density greater than one dwelling unit per acre in an approved sewer service area to trigger an affordable housing set-aside obligation.
- ⁷ The applicability of Irvine’s program is dependent upon city and federal funding availability. Compliance with its terms is a “goal,” not a strict requirement, though a city official reported that nearly all developments comply with the program.
- ⁸ Developers in Irvine may pursue a range of alternatives to construction of affordable units on-site. In addition to fees in lieu of construction, developers may provide land to not-for-profit developers of affordable housing, convert existing market rate housing into affordable housing, and extend the term of affordability on current affordable units.
- ⁹ California state law requires a 25% density bonus for developers of affordable housing. In Irvine, however, not many developers take advantage of this option.
- ¹⁰ Although Irvine currently offers no developer incentives other than a state-required density bonus, it has in the past (and will consider doing so again in the future) offered developers of affordable housing reduced parking requirements, reduced fees, reduced park land dedications, and expedited permitting.
- ¹¹ All residential development on land annexed to the city triggers an affordable housing obligation.
- ¹² Developers who construct affordable housing are eligible for regulatory incentives, including reduced parking requirements, smaller setback requirements, and reduced landscaping obligations.
- ¹³ Montgomery County permits developers to increase the sales prices of units by 10% to fund amenities that make the affordable units visually compatible with market rate units. Developers of affordable units also may build up to 40% attached units in an otherwise detached unit development, and they may receive some concessions on lot sizes that enable them to use their land more efficiently.
- ¹⁴ Santa Fe triggers an affordable housing obligation if any dwelling unit in a development is targeted to households with incomes over 120% of the area median income (AMI).
- ¹⁵ Homes targeted to households earning between 120 and 200% of area median income (AMI) are priced between $240,000 and $400,000.
- ¹⁶ Homes targeted to households earning in excess of 200% of area median income (AMI) are priced over $400,000.
- ¹⁷ Homes targeted to households earning less than 80% of area median income (AMI) are priced under $150,000.
